Watling Street (in the cushioned basket)

The ancient paved road stretches for miles to the south, turning very slowly to the northeast along a mossy stone wall. From up here on your elephant's wickerwork basket, you're just level with the branches of the old Imperial hunting woods inside the wall.

Having been stuck in this cushioned basket with the Lady Amilia every day for a fortnight, you're just desperate to get away.

The procession of elephants shuffles on, their enormous soles slapping onto the flagstones with a dull, regular boom.
